→ Right in the middle of the action is Fly-N-Fish, an intimate restaurant and bar, offering the perfect spot to watch the surf rise and the sun fall. The street level view and Newport Beach crowd makes the people watching as entertaining as the food and drink.

Newport comes alive during happy hour, and Fly-N-Fish offers specials from 3pm to 6pm Monday through Friday to bring a beautiful end to the day. Obviously with “oyster” in the title, it would be essential that they are offered during happy hour. A half-dozen freshly shucked oysters are $10, or $2 a shot. Another crowd pleaser is the clam chowder, which is a staple on any seafood menu. Many Bostonians have come in extremely defensive, wanting to try it, especially at happy hour when it’s $6 a cup, for the right to bash it. Too bad! According to the chef, they quickly become apologetic after the first spoonful. Sustainability and freshness come to mind when it concerns seafood, and the chef is, in part, leading the charge. He is very passionate when communicating the need to ensure the health of the oceans, and works with Santa Monica Seafood. Together, they ensure constant delivery of only sustainable and fresh catches.

The beach atmosphere makes it the perfect place for board shorts and a colorful cocktail. It is hard to determine where the sunset ends and the Mai Tai begins. The great windows overlooking the main drag of Newport with the Pacific Ocean right behind ensures an ever-changing scene.
